Below is a paragraph that contains several common writing mistakes. You must transcribe the paragraph – that means copy it word-for-word – but make corrections as you write. If a sentence does not contain errors, do not change it. Your task is to:

- Transcribe the entire paragraph on your answer sheet.
- While transcribing, correct all the errors in grammar, punctuation, and sentence structure.

Balancing academic responsibilities and personal life is a common challenge for university students. Many undergraduates in Taiwan take part-time jobs, join student clubs, or prepare for certification exams while attending classes they also try to maintain a social life. Effective time management becomes essential to avoid stress and burnout, it helps students stay organized. Using planners or digital calendars. Can help students prioritize tasks and meet deadlines. Although it may be difficult at first, developing good habits early on can lead to long-term success both in school and in future careers. Trying to study late at night, the library was already closed. Some students feels overwhelmed by the pressure to succeed, and they often forget to take breaks. To manage this, they can break large tasks into smaller, more manageable steps and setting realistic goals. It's also important to schedule time for rest and hobbies to maintain mental health. Universities often offer counseling services and workshops on time management, which can be valuable resources. By learning to balance their responsibilities, student can make the most of their university experience and prepare for life after they graduate it.
